Touching Hearts.
Transforming Lives and Communities.

What is FICF

The Foundation for Indian Children's Future (FICF) is a non-profit organization that primarily focuses on supporting the education and well-being of underprivileged children in India. Founded to help children access quality education, healthcare, and essential resources, FICF works through various programs aimed at improving educational opportunities, nutritional support, and health services for children in in need, especially girls, in India.

EDUCATION

HEALTHCARE

The vision of FICF is to transform the lives of underprivileged children and marginalized communities in India by breaking the cycle of poverty, and to uplift them with compassion and inclusivity inspired by Biblical values, regardless of religion, caste, or ethnicity.

> "Empowering children today, building a brighter tomorrow.

What do we do

The Foundation for Indian Children's Future carries out all its projects under three programs, namely, Child Care Program (CCP), Tuition and Nutrition Program (TNP), and Community Development Program (CDP).

- CCP is for children living in cities or suburbs and going to Private English medium of education school which gives them wider opportunity in all aspects.
- TNP is for children living in rural and remote areas where there is a scarcity of school, and/or children go to Government run school, often far and many drop out without even completing primary education.
- CDP program includes medical camps & medical support, disaster relief and aid, opportunities to sustainable income, relief for elderly, single women/widows, labourers and very poor and downtrodden families.

Why do we do

In India, girls face multiple challenges that impact their education, health, and social standing, despite recent progress. Enrolment in schools has increased, but girls, especially in rural areas, still drop out due to poverty, domestic responsibilities, and inadequate hygiene facilities. Health disparities persist, as girls often receive less nutrition and face limited access to healthcare. Child marriage remains a problem, leading to interrupted education and early motherhood. Safety concerns and gender-based violence restrict girls' freedom, while cultural norms and discrimination often limit their opportunities in education and employment. FICF helps bridge these gaps, providing educational, health, and skill development support to empower girls, promote gender equality, and improve their prospects.

FICF's work primarily advances Sustainable Development Goals

FICF's work also contributes to Goals 2 (Zero Hunger), 3 (Good Health and Well-being), 4 (Quality Education), 6 (Clean Water and Sanitation), and 10 (Reduced Inequalities). Special emphasis is placed on addressing the challenges faced by girls, including school dropout, early marriage, limited healthcare access, and social discrimination. By promoting education, health, safety, and skill development, FICF seeks to empower children, especially girls, and foster inclusive, sustainable communities.

Alignment with FICF's Initiatives:

Education and Skill Development

FICF's programs that provide educational aid and skill development opportunities for children, especially girls from marginalized communities, align with the UNHRC's emphasis on eliminating barriers to education and.

Health and Nutrition

Through its Tuition and Nutrition Program, FICF addresses health disparities by providing nutritious food and healthcare support, resonating with the Council's focus on health rights and combating malnutrition.

Protection Against Violence and Exploitation

FICF's efforts to protect children and women from exploitation and abuse are in line with the UNHRC's resolutions on eliminating violence and trafficking.

Empowerment of Women and Girls

By supporting widows, single mothers, and elderly women through its Community Development Program, FICF contributes to the empowerment of women, reflecting the Council's objectives to enhance women's socio-economic status.

FICF's grassroots initiatives in India not only address immediate needs but also contribute to the broader goals set by the UNHRC, making the organization a valuable partner in advancing human rights and empowerment for women and children.
